SILK ROUTE

Fancy a treat? Then spend a night at The Goring Hotel in London. The Belgravia suites have all been revamped, with historic silks from The Gainsborough Silk Weaving Company rewoven as wallcoverings. These include 'Renaissance', a gold silk from Packwood House in Warwickshire, and 'Louis Quatorze' (pictured), created for the music room at London's Lancaster House. You'll feel truly spoiled. From £1,918 per night (thegoring.com).

12. NAME TO WATCH
FORMAFANTASMA

Who are they? Young Italian-born, Netherlands-based design duo Simone Farresin and Andrea Trimarchi.

What makes them so special? They bridge the gap between exquisite craftsmanship and function. Oh, and they've just been shortlisted for an ELLE Decoration International Design Award, too.

Where can I see their work?

Their 'Craftica' series, an experimental collection of handmade stools, lights, vessels and tools, is on show at the Libby Sellers Gallery in central London now. Working in collaboration with Fendi, they've put discarded leathers and other natural materials at the heart of their design process. Until February 28 (libbysellers.com).

13. TAKE FLIGHT

Let's face it: unless you're lucky enough to be sitting in first class on an aeroplane, your in-flight experience is often nothing to shout about. But for those flying Finnair, that's all about to change. The airline has teamed up with Marimekko on a collection that features the design house's classic patterns. Think seat headrest covers and blankets and, for those in business class, colourful tablecloths, napkins and tableware as well. Not flying for a while? The new products are available to buy, too. 'Oiva Seireeni' teapot, £40; 'Oiva Koppelo' mug, £18.50 for two (marimekko.com).
