London gallery presents Drawn From, a exhibition of objects with 'linear qualities'

From wallpaper patterns to entire buildings, so much of what we see around us still begins life as lines on a drawing board (or a bit of paper at least). Now, a new exhibition at Gallery Libby Sellers in London celebrates designed objects that in their own way reference linear or 'drawn' qualities.

Called Drawn From, the exhibition, which is on until 1 March 2014, comprises a number of objects, from boldly idiosyncratic stools from Anton Alvarez's Thread Wrapping Machine series to a series of 24 architecture-inspired lights by Paola Petrobelli, all of which are described by the gallery as possessing a 'linear quality'.

There's also Hunting & Narud's sculptural Copper Mirror series and pieces from Simon Hasan's Geno series of leather/brass furniture.

Gallery Libby Sellers was launched in 2007 by the former senior curator of the London Design Museum to offer a platform for the support and sale for design that exists outside of the mainstream industry. Recent exhibitions have included a group show curated by Aldo Bakker, the 'Craftica' series of works with FENDI by Italian designers Formafantasma; and a presentation of hand-woven carpets by acclaimed French graphic design studio M/M (Paris). Upcoming exhibitions and profiles of the designers/works available can be found on the website libbysellers.com
